THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE.

First Day's Celebration of the Event.

Great Success of the Sham Battle at the Park.

Over Ten Thousand Spectators View the Manœuvres.

The Illumination of the Fleet a Beautiful Spectacle.

The jubilee celebration yesterday in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of Her Majesty's accession to the throne, was ushered in by a delightful day, an immense crowd, beautiful decorations and a splendid military display, forming one of the most loyal and enthusiastic events ever known in Victoria. The whole city was in holiday attire, and early in the morning a scene of activity prevailed upon the thronged streets, which predicted the immense concourse of people that afterward gathered on Beacon hill. The decorations on many buildings were elaborate and some of them beautiful and novel in design, though the city was not as profusely decorated as might have been expected by the thousands of visitors from across the Sound and from the mainland. The roads leading into the city were lined with vehicles of every description occupied by visitors from the rural districts, and gaily decorated carriages passed rapidly along the main thoroughfares to Beacon hill. By 10 o'clock fully were assembled on the brow of the hill or scattered through the woods, where innumerable picnic parties enjoyed this delightful refuge from the burning sun, in broad shady vistas beneath the grand old trees. Others who never tire of viewing the magnificent scenery, feasted their eyes on an elysium of nature's fairest phases. The atmosphere was unusually clear, and through the transparent film across the straits, the grand snow-capped peaks of the Olympian range formed an indescribable picture of loveliness, while below the timber line pretty shadows of crimson, amber and amythest were reflected up to the glistening snow. Calm and blue as the clear sky reflected in their depths, the waters of the straits presented a study upon which the eye could gaze for hours without satiety. Many availed themselves of the morning hours to visit the beach, where the gentle swell made a music as sweet as it was indefinable. Mount Baker shone with a grandeur irrepressibly charming, and many strangers for the nonce forgot the occasion of their visit in the contemplation of this majestic mountain, which is nature's majesty and never fails to elicit admiration and rapture from every lover of all that is grand, pure, æsthetic and beautiful in nature.

There may be other colonies where subjects paid homage to their Queen yesterday with more pomp and greater ceremony, yet it must be conceded that British Columbia has given a loyal, heartfelt demonstration which, if witnessed by Her Majesty, would cause a thrill of joyous pride for the enthusiasm and

LOVE SHOWN TO HER MEMORY.

Not only was this sentiment observed among the civilians, but among the officers and men of Her Majesty's navy, who were indefatigable in their efforts to pay a fitting tribute to the memory of the Queen in her fiftieth year of accession to the throne of the grandest nation on the globe. The parade grounds were outlined by flags placed at intervals around a large square inclosed on one side by a rope to keep back the throng of spectators, and long before the arrival of the military every available point of observation was taken. Considerable interest was manifested in the yacht race, and a large number of spectators visited the outer wharf or secured positions along the shore to watch the gayly decked boats as they sped along the course. At 11:30 the forces from Esquimalt arrived in H. M. S. boats and disembarked at McDonald's point where they bivouacked and partook of luncheon. After an hour's rest they formed in line and marched towards Beacon hill, and as the approaching troops came in view the great concourse of people on the hill moved forward in one dense mass in anticipation of the pleasure their arrival would give. There were about four hundred and fifty officers and men in the command, and as they entered the parade grounds showing a shout of welcome went forth to the brave defenders of the Queen. The command marched along the west side of the grounds amid hearty applause and fronted into line, after which they were joined by the militia on the left. It was a most entertaining sight to look along the line and observe so many men of intelligence and soldierly bearing, conveying to the mind a feeling of respect and proud admiration for England's defenders, the bravest, and most loyal troops in the world. What must be the heart promptings of the Queen at such demonstrations of concession to her power! It awakens an echoing love from every heart to know that she would give her life to perpetuate England to her subjects, with the same sacrificing spirit that her defenders would risk all to gain a victory for their Queen, and protect the peace, prosperity and homes of England and the colonies.

VOLUNTEER BATTALION.

At 1 o'clock the three batteries of the B. C. Garrison Artillery, the Victoria Rifle company and the rifles from New Westminster, assembled at the drill shed. The New Westminster men were "the observed of all observers" and too great praise cannot be given them for their steadiness and the completeness of their parade. In this latter particular they threw all the local corps into the shade, for the artillery mustered so few that the three batteries had to be merged into two and the rifle company had scarcely four complete sections of fours. The battalion was in command of Lt.-Col. Wolfenden and Major Prior.

No. 1 Company, Capts. Jones, Shears and Lieut. Irving.

No. 2 Company, Capts. Smallfield, Nicholles and Lieut. Robson.

MEDICAL OFFICERS.

Fleet Surgeon Thomas Bolster, of H. M.S. Triumph.

Staff Surgeon Albert C. Queely, of H. M.S. Conquest.

Surgeon Frederick A. Trevan, of H.M. S. Triumph.

The number of officers and men composing the brigade was as follows:—H. M. S. Triumph, 259; H. M. S. Conquest, 133; H.M.S. Caroline, 89; H.M.S. Cormorant, 83. Total naval brigade, 564. Volunteer brigade, 125. Total on parade, 689.

THE FEU DE JOIE.

The forces were drawn up in line near the race track and facing Beacon hill at 2 o'clock. Upon the arrival of Admiral Sir Michael Culme Seymour Bart and staff they were received with a general salute. The following officers were on the staff: Capt. Rose, R. N., Col. Holmes, D.A.G., Lieut. Lang, R. E., and Lieut. Garforth, R. N.

The ranks having been opened a feu de joie was fired. The field guns of the naval brigade on the extreme right having fired seven rounds, the fire was taken up by the front rank and ran down the entire length of the line and up the rear rank like a flash. A second and a third time the same running fire was given, and each time with a promptness and steadiness on the part of the colonial troops that was exceedingly gratifying to the officers.

ROYAL SALUTE.

The next incident was the royal salute, and as one looked at the long line of soldiers with their arms at the present and listened to the time honored strains of the grand old national anthem, he must indeed have been a cold hearted individual who did not feel himself warm with loyal pride for his Queen, his country, and its defenders. Immediately after the salute the ranks were closed and Admiral Sir M. Culme Seymour called for three cheers for Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria. The commanding officer having repeated the order the entire force with caps and helmets cutting circles in the air gave three such hearty cheers as only British soldiers can give.

THE MARCH PAST.

The brigades were then formed in quarter column and wheeled round to the saluting base. These preliminary movements were executed in very good form by both brigades. The order to march past in column having been given, the companies in succession stepped off to the tune of "Nancy Lee," played by the magnificent band of H. M. S. Triumph, under the lead of Prof. Agius. To watch company after company as straight as possible, go past the saluting point with a swinging stride as even as clock work, was a sight that will not be soon forgotten by those who were privileged to see it. After wheeling round, first went the battery of field guns, next the blue jackets, and the royal marine light infantry; then the B. C. garrison artillery followed by the Victoria rifle company and the New Westminster rifles in the order named. Having wheeled round the third and fourth points the order "line to right on the rear companies" brought the troops back to their original ground.

THE BATTERY EXERCISES.

While the remainder of the line was allowed to stand at ease, the field guns under command of L. D. Sampson were brought into action. This was pre-eminently the piece de resistance of the entire review, and called forth round after round of applause from the thousands of spectators who lined the slopes of the hill. With an agility at once bewildering and surprising on the order "retire" being given to the battery as it advanced, what was the most perfect of order suddenly changed into seemingly inextricable confusion as the nimble crews swept round at the double, bringing guns and limbers after them as though made of tin; and presently the guns were going in the opposite direction, once more in perfect order. But what was more astonishing was the almost incredible shortness of the time in which, on the supposed disablement of the gun carriage, the gun was dismounted, the carriage taken to pieces and guns, wheels, carriages and everything piled on the gun limber and safely carted to the rear. However improbable it may seem, it is nevertheless true, that the whole of these complicated and laborious operations were performed in less time than it takes to write them.

THE CUTLASS EXERCISES.

The guns having been taken to the rear, the brigade of blue-jackets were formed up with intervals and were put through the cutlass exercises by Lieut. T. H. Fisher. This drill must be seen to be appreciated; but coming as it did after the brilliant performances of the artillery, it was somewhat overshadowed in the popular mind, and did not receive the applause to which it was entitled. The cutlass in the hands of the British tar has won for itself a name in the annals of history and in "Jack's" handling of it Britain owes much of her naval glory. No better opportunity of judging of the deadliness of this weapon, when wielded by brawny arms at close quarters, could be had than that afforded by the blue-jackets yesterday. The ease with which the cuts and guards were done with the cutlass in the left hand demonstrated that the men were as perfectly, "at home" as with the right.

THE BAYONET EXERCISES.

The Royal Marines, under command of Major R. B. Kirchhoffer, R. M. L. I., were then marched to the front, and being opened at intervals went through the bayonet exercises. The same remark as regards popular appreciation as that made in the previous paragraph may be made with reference to this exercise also. The precision with which the two companies executed the various movements of "guard," "point," "low guard," "high guard," "head parry," etc., etc., to right and left, and right about, was quite remarkable. The perfection with which the entire command moved together could be plainly seen, particularly as the points of the bayonets in "point" from "high guard" rose in the air at the same instant. This finished the exercises by the naval brigade.

MANUAL EXERCISES.

The volunteers were next put through the manual exercises by Lieut.-Col. Wolfenden. This was not so brilliant a performance as those allotted to the navy, but the volunteers acquitted themselves of their part in a most satisfactory manner. To expect volunteers to display all the steadiness of thoroughly drilled troops is the height of the ridiculous, particularly as their chances for brigade and battalion drill are most limited.

THE SHAM FIGHT.

The column having been again formed the troops were marched off to take up their positions for the event of the day—the long-looked for sham-fight. A company of seamen, under Commander Simpson, together with the Victoria rifles under Capt. Wollacott marched to the summit of the hill and took up their position in the trenches to defend the three guns which were mounted there. The rest marched down to the foot of Cook street and took up their position in rear of the woods. After a short pause a signal gun was fired and the leading companies of each half battalion were thrown out as a fighting line, the remainder acting as supports and reserves and began the advance and opened fire on the hill. As the lines worked their way through the woods a sharp fire was kept up on them from the three guns on the hill and by a line of skirmishers which had been thrown out in advance of the works. As the attacking force cleared the woods a determined stand was made by the defending force and volley after volley was exchanged in rapid succession, the field guns of the naval brigade keeping up a steady roar so admirably were they served.

THE ASSAULT.

The defenders were closely pressed, and the volunteers having driven them out of the clump of trees on the right of their line they were forced to retire and take refuge in the entrenched position on the hill. Across the open and up to the foot of the hill the invaders gradually forced their way, when an imaginary charge of the defender's cavalry being about to take place rallying squares were formed and several volleys having been poured into the cavalry the attack was supposed to be driven off. The fighting line was again thrown out, but owing to the hotness of the fire from the defences it was found necessary to bring up reinforcements to the line. This having been done an advance was made to the brow of the hill where an order for independent firing was given, and close running fire was kept up for about ten minutes. So quickly are the Martini rifles loaded the naval brigade was enabled to keep a continual blaze along their lines, but the volunteers having the Snider rifles could not keep up with them.

THE CHARGE.

The position having been thoroughly peppered with lead the order to charge was given, and in spite of the sweltering heat of both the sun and the hot rifles the troops sprang to their feet and with a cheer closed on the enemy with a rush. Their last position having been forced the defenders were supposed to spring mines and under cover of the suppositious smoke made good their retreat down the other side of the hill and capitulated unconditionally.

NOTES.

The want of water amongst the volunteers was keenly felt during the afternoon on account of the scorching heat, which was so great that one man dropped in a faint, and if the exposure to the sun's rays on the southern slope of the hill had continued for half an hour longer there cannot be the slightest doubt but what many others would have succumbed. Every man in the naval brigade had his water-flask, while not the slightest provision was made to give volunteers unaccustomed to so great a strain even a drop to quench their thirst.

The volunteer who was overcome by the heat was kindly taken charge of by the ambulance from the navy, that in connection with the volunteers being somewhere else.

A most unfortunate mistake occurred in the arrangements to give the troops some refreshment after the day's work. The officers of the militia were given to understand that ample provisions would be made for the volunteers as well as the naval brigade at the agricultural hall, but when the force marched down to the hall they were told that the refreshments were for the naval only. While glad to see that some little attention was shown the navy, it is too bad that the men from New Westminster were treated in such a manner.

Many desperate attempts to get water were made by the volunteers, some scrambling around pumps for at least twenty minutes without being successful. Numerous drinks were begged from the marines and the blue jackets who were always good hearted enough to hand over their canteens even if it was their last drop.

By their actions to-day the people of British Columbia know that in their volunteers they have a force which is ready to do their duty faithfully if ever called on to fight in defence of their country. Although not so thoroughly drilled as might be wished, still the men are capable and willing. Capt. Rose, through Lt.-Col. Wolfenden, conveyed to the men his admiration of their conduct and soldier-like bearing.

A blue jacket was severely burned about the face and right arm yesterday by the premature discharge of a canon during the sham battle.

Several people were overcome by the intense heat and two or three fainted. In the artillery ranks one young man actually fell down in a faint, presumably from sheer exhaustion, and was carried from the scene.

There was considerable excitement over the boat-race from Behren's Island lighthouse, round east Brotchie Ledge buoy, thence to Albert Head; returning around Brotchie Ledge buoy to Behren's lighthouse. The following crafts started in the race at 10 o'clock: Albatross, Eva, Mary, Ada, Frolic, Scud, Bertha, Lightning and Teal.

A light, steady breeze was blowing at the start, and a closely contested race was anticipated by the spectators. There was some error, however, about the location of the turning boat, which marred the race. The Frolic and Bertha steered straight for the stake-boat, and as the other boats steered for Albert Head they were practically beaten ere half the course was sailed. The Frolic came in first, the Bertha second. The silver cup was awarded to the Frolic.

Illumination of the Fleet.

In spite of the slight announcement as to the sailing of steamers, there was a large crowd at the wharves to take passage to Esquimalt at 7 last evening. The steamers R. P. Rithet, Yosemite and Amelia were crowded with passengers, and the Olympian and Evangel each took their passengers down to see the event. The steamers Daisy and Saturna also had a number of passengers. Many went down in carriages and omnibusses, and the bay was alive with small boats. Th[e ex]cursion of the Island railway was [well] patronized and a splendid view was [ob]tained from the cars. The prese[nce] of so many vessels in Esquimalt, th[e] lights glimmering from all directions, ba[nds] playing and choruses singing, tended [to] make the scene one of great attraction. T[he] four war vessels were placed so that th[e] flagship Triumph was in the centre, an[d] the Cormorant, Conquest and Caroline i[n] a semi-circle inshore. As each steame[r] with its freight arrived a circle of the warships was made amid the cheers of the blue-jackets and music of the bands. The vessels then came to anchor at some convenient point. At the firing of the preparations were made on each of the war vessels for stringing the Chinese lanterns. After the lapse of fifteen minutes a line of lights were extended on each ship from the bows-sprit to the foremast, thence to the mainmast and to the mizzen-mast, and down to the stern. This made a complete outline of the vessel in pretty lights, and the four ships dressed thus, swinging into different positions with the tide, presented a most enchanting picture, and the display was applauded from every quarter of the harbor. After the lapse of some time a shrill whistle from the boatswain caused magnesium lights to be lit simultaneously in various parts of the rigging on each of the vessels while electric lights shown from the mastheads. The contrasting colors o[f] the various lights made a most enchanting picture, and caused a loud cheer to go up, the steamer and railway whistles joining in the general acclamation. This was decidedly the SUCCESS OF THE EVENING.

Rockets and Greek fire were sent up at intervals and variegated the effect. The last feature shown was that of the strong calcium lights, thrown from the Triumph and Caroline. It was amazing to watch the celerity with which these lights could be moved to any point of the compass, raised and lowered so as to distinguish objects on the water or land for miles. The experiments made were very interesting and proved the wonderful strength and value of the light.

During the progress of the illumination the splendid flagship band, the fife and drum bands of the other warships and the bands on the Yosemite, Olympian and Amelia, enlivened the evening with music, while occasionally male choruses from the war vessels would break out in sweet harmony. It was after eleven o'clock before the

and the steamers returned to the city. A device with mottos on four sides was hung from the yard of the flagship with appropriate words for the occasion.

Altogether the event was unique and interesting, and certainly the most enjoyable of the day's proceedings. Admiral Seymour and staff and everyone connected with last night's entertainment, are to be congratulated for the delightful event and the excellent way in which everything connected with it was carried out. Everyone was pleased and could not praise too highly the beauty of the scene.

THE JUBILEE.

Yesterday's exercises at Beacon Hill were a fitting prelude to the festivities attending the celebration of the Queen's Jubilee. No more delightful spot could be imagined in which to enjoy a gala day, and with "Queen's weather" flooding the scene with sunlight and warmth and color the Park formed a pretty setting for the movements of our gallant defenders. Across the straits the everlasting hills of the Olympic range of mountains showed more clearly than usual, their snow capped peaks towering in sublime majesty to the cloud flecked heavens. Far away to the east Mount Baker, the monarch of Washington Territory, loomed up grandly in the distance, while, with the placid straits and the grandly green foilage, the entire tout ensemble could not have been excelled in any part of the world. The manœuvres preliminary to the sham fight were perhaps the most attractive feature of the occasion and our jolly tars did themselves proud. Proud we are of them and proud our vast empire ought to be of such manly fellows. Glancing over the ranks and seeing discipline and intelligence everywhere prevailing one was led to look far away and congratulate himself on the fact that Britain's might is still all powerful and that she need never fear if the worst should come. We can quite imagine them "standing like greyhounds in the slip, straining upon the start" and with that cry which since Harfleur has been ringing down the years, "Heaven for Harry, England and St. George," sweeping on to do yeoman service for the old flag. May the day be long distant when they shall be called upon to wrestle in behalf of their country, but should that day come we may look confidently to the prowess and valor of the "blue jackets!" The sham fight was an unqualified success. The charge was particularly effective and the movements were executed in good style. As the height was reached with an hurrah that made the welkin ring, the spectators felt that they had seen a grand sight, which to many was quite novel. Our local warriors and their New Westminster brethren did fine work, and many were the plaudits passed upon their military skill. The Royal City ought to be very proud of her boys, who show careful training and particularly fine discipline. So, happily the twenty-first day of June, the fiftieth anniversary of Queen Victoria's accession to the throne, was spent in his loyal city, of which those who participated in it, will ever have a pleasant memory. It is estimated that Beacon Hill held yesterday at least ten thousand people, and a very large number of these were Americans. The Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes floated side by side, and the entente cordiale existing between the two nations was exemplified in the conduct towards each other of their representatives. So far as this portion of Her Majesty's Dominions, so closely connected as it is in the bonds of amity with the United States, is concerned, we look for none other, we desire none other, than the same hearty feelings of friendship and kinship in the future. The celebration was on the whole a grand success, the brilliant illumination of the fleet in the evening being a happy climax to an eventful day. The programme for to-day promises to even transcend in interest that of yesterday, and with a zeal for Our Gracious Sovereign in keeping with her excellence, the Jubilee will be worthily consummated. The noblest sovereign who to-day wears the diadem, she sees honoring her a happy, devoted people who bless her for all her queenliness, her goodness and her womanliness.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN!

PANAMA CANAL TROUBLES.

Many conflicting rumors and statements have been received from the Isthmus of Panama concerning the present and future of the canal, and out of them it has been all but impossible to sift the truth. The difficulty has been that all these reports were tinged with prejudices for or against the canal, depending upon whether they emanated from the friends of De Lesseps or from his enemies. But now there comes a statement from Lieutenant Rogers of the United States navy which may be considered reliable. Lieutenant Rogers was detailed to accompany Charles De Lesseps, vice-president of the canal company, on his tour to inspect the works and arrange with the contractors for the prosecution of the enterprise. The trip commenced on March 10th and lasted seventeen days, during which time Lieutenant Rogers saw every foot of the canal, talked with contractors and laborers, and had every opportunity to form a correct estimate of the probabilities of success. He says, as to the amount of work, that the estimated total excavation for the canal is placed at 105,090,000 cubic meters. Out of this the amount completed is 31,920,000 cubic meters, leaving 73,170,000 cubic meters to be excavated. He is of opinion that the most uncertain problem is the time it will take to complete the work at the Culebra mountain. He says that during the rainy season the surface becomes saturated with water, and the increased weight, coupled with the incline, causes the surface deposit to slide into the excavation for the canal. Also, that the natural washout of the sides by the heavy rains is another cause of deposit, and, worse still, that the mountain on the left side of the cut is moving bodly toward the canal at an annual rate of from twelve to eighteen inches. He fixes the time necessary for the completion of the work, provided all the money necessary were subscribed and men and machines worked to their utmost, at seven years from this date. But the most serious difficulty alluded to by Lieutenant Rogers is the financial one. According to his statement the amount available for expenditure hereafter on the canal, was on March 1st, $45,686,461. But some years ago the canal company mortgaged its interest in the Panama railroad—68,000 shares out of 70,000—to three New York firms for about $6,000,000. This mortgage, including interest, now amounts to $21,000,000, and is due, principal and interest, this year. There is also $14,000,000 due for interest on canal bonds, making $35,000,000 to be paid this year, and deducted from the $45,000,000 available for construction and leaving for work and expenses only something over $10,000,000.

If Lieutenant Rogers is correct the financial condition of the canal company is very bad. It is evident that $10,000,000 will not go far toward completing the work, as up to March 1st of the present year over $130,000,000 had been spent and less than one-third of the excavation completed. The canal thus becomes not only a question of time, but a question of money, and De Lesseps will be compelled to put forth the most strenuous efforts to find the funds necessary to finish the work.

RAINFALL is a subject which in a general way is constantly brought to our attention. But with the water that descends from the clouds, as with many other ordinary matters, we may be very familiar, and still know very little about it. The atmospheric conditions, which at one time occasion an over-abundance of rain, and at another seem to leave the sky without a drop of moisture, are developments of which most of us have no knowledge whatever, and those who have studied the matter most carefully only understand it very imperfectly. It has been observed that countries which are the most prolific in vegetation are usually favored with the largest annual rainfall, and those which are largely occupied by deserts are found to have the smallest amount. The great sand barrens of Asia, Africa and America contain extensive tracts upon which a drop of rain never falls and above which a cloud is seldom observed. It would be difficult to imagine situations more melancholy and deadly than these same shadowless and waterless plains. But, strange to say, the people who spend most of their lives in roaming over their yellow extents are among the most perfect examples of physical manhood found upon our planet. A very interesting paper has recently been prepared on the world's yearly rainfall by Mr. John Murray, of the Royal society of Edinburgh. From Mr. Murray's figures it appears that the areas of country having an inclined drainage aggregate about 11,486,350 square miles, and each year receive 2,243 cubic miles of rain. The total surface drained directly into the ocean equals 44,211,000 square miles, of which 38,829,750 square miles receive more than ten inches of annual rainfall. From these water sheds 6,569 cubic miles of liquid return to the sea each year. Through the channels of all these rivers not less than 5,000,000,000 tons of solid matter is annually carried into the ocean.

HERBERT'S FORTUNE.

Old Mr. Turnbull had a will of his own. No one disputed the fact, and possibly no one would have objected to it, had he acknowledged the right of anyone else to have a will of his own; but this he was by no means content to do, being of the opinion, it seemed, that he possessed the monopoly of the article.

Herbert Langley did not often go against his uncle's will, but when he did, then came the tug of war.

Mr. Turnbull had forbidden his nephew, under pain of his perpetual displeasure, which meant disinheritance and an end of all intercourse between them, even to dream of a marriage with Ethel Jarvis; and the young man had quietly informed him that the said marriage had ceased to be a matter of dreams, and was very soon to be a reality.

Consequently, open war was declared: Herbert was ordered to leave his uncle's house at a moment's notice, and Gertrude Roddy, the orphan daughter of a distant relative, was installed in his place with all rights, present and prospective.

Herbert had saved Ethel Jarvis' life, in a very heroic and praiseworthy manner, upon the occasion of a terrible boat disaster, and he had become from that moment the idol and hero of the young girl's heart.

As for himself, although he affected to think lightly of the deed, and turned aside all expressions of gratitude as uncalled for, yet he must have secretly placed a high estimate on his conduct, for he would accept nothing less than the life he had saved for a reward.

The two young people loved each other faithfully and fondly, and as Herbert left his uncle's house, with proud and angry haste, it was with a deep sense of the old man's injustice burning hotly at his heart.

"What right had he to bring me up without profession, or other means of earning a livelihood, if my position in his business were not a sure thing, irrespective of his wishes with regard to my marriage, or anything else? Even a good trade would be a boon now. As it is—Poor Ethel!"

Ethel kept house for her father in a pretty little cottage that they rented near Hastings, from the windows of which they had, upon one side, the most superb of ocean views; upon the other, a woodland scene of the loveliest hills and dales in the world.

Mr. Jarvis was a journalist whose work was not nearly so remunerative as it was hard and constant; lately his health had failed, and both mind and hand had demanded rest, in a way that could not be denied.

Symptoms of paralysis were evident, and Ethel, in great alarm, insisted that her father should cease work.

Their little "rainy-day" fund was called into requisition, and Ethel herself obtained a clerkship in the town telegraph office—a position for which she had qualified herself in secrecy, for her father, a gentleman by birth and education, looked with horror upon the idea of his lovely daughter increasing their income by an avocation which called her from the shelter of her home.

She broke the news of the step she had taken as gently as possible, laughing merrily at his old-fashioned objections—for so she styled them—and coaxing from him an unwilling consent to that which was indeed a necessity.

"Dear father, your old-world notions are mere prejudices, in which I take no part. Anyway, it's only for a while, dear, for you know I, too, am of a literary turn of mind, and when that heap of scattered manuscript upstairs is metamorphosed into a successful book, then I will remember my duty to my ancestors, and retire into private life. In the meantime I must keep the pot boiling by electricity."

"Still another use for the magic fluid!" he replied with a smile; then sighed and kissed the girl's golden head, but offered no more objections to her project.

Thus their affairs stood when Herbert came and announced his uncle's decision.

A hot flush rose on Mr. Jarvis' pale delicate face, and his fingers worked nervously.

"My daughter shall never marry into a family where she will not be more than welcome," he said haughtily.

"I do not ask it, sir. I have no family. My uncle has himself severed all connection between us, and henceforth I owe him no duty. Your daughter is my betrothed wife, with your consent, and, please heaven, I will soon make a home which shall be worthy of her."

He turned and caught her two hands in his and drew her to his side.

"Ethel, darling, I have come to say good-by. I must go away at once."

"Go away?" she gasped in surprise.

"Yes; I cannot stay to struggle in poverty. I have an uncle in Australia—my father's brother—who has often asked me to join him there.

"He is rich. I will now accept from him gratefully the assistance I have hitherto slighted.

"The sooner I go, the sooner I can return, dear love, rich, and able to make you happy. Ethel, darling, my ship sails to-morrow!"

"To-morrow! So soon! Ah no; not to-morrow." And they plighted their troth anew and parted.

* * * * *

"For whom are you in mourning, Linda?" asked Miss Gertrude Roddy, of her maid, as the latter braided the heavy masses of her lustrous black hair, and rolled it about her handsome head.

"For my father, madam."

"Has he been long dead?"

"No—oh no. It is only nine months since he died," the girl replied in a low voice.

"Nine months! Why, that is nearly a year! I had put off mourning for my father by that time!"

And the lady toyed with the rose ribbons of her dove-colored peignoir, and shook her head with a gentle sigh.

"I will wear my diamonds, Linda. Have you got them ready?"

"Yes, madam. But you requested me to remind you to try the effect of the sapphires with this wine-colored velvet."

"Oh, yes; so I did. I think it will be charming."

"Shall I be admired, Linda? Will Colonel Raeburn admire me, do you think?"

"He must be very deficient in taste if he does not," the maid replied with a smile; "your fan, madam."

"I think so myself," Gertrude answered, regarding herself in the mirror with undisguised approval. "Herbert Langley was certainly a very foolish young man, and quite blind to his own interests."

And with a shrug and a light laugh she turned and swept away.

Miss Roddy appreciated her new maid, and valued highly the improvement in her own appearance since Linda Lyle had had the selection and adjustment of her toilettes.

She was in the habit of treating her rather differently from her former maids, having discovered that she was quite a superior person for the station.

Her new maid puzzled her. She would have been more puzzled, perhaps, had she seen Linda after the door was closed. For one moment she stood with flashing eyes and glowing cheek, then she sank on a sofa with hands clasped.

"Ah, now I know why Herbert was so eager to be gone. His uncle not only forbade his marriage with me, but insisted on his marrying her. Dear boy, he dreaded some entanglement, and feared to stay.

"And he was right. For if I read her truly, Gertrude Roddy would not hesitate to take the initiative if she wished to make a man marry her.

"Ah, Herbert, my love, why do I not hear from you? but I will keep a good heart, still hoping for your return. And I am not the only one; for well I understand the sad wistful look on your uncle's face. Dear old man, cruel and hateful as he is to us, yet do I love him dearly; and it will be a strange thing if I do not find my way into his heart soon, for Herbert's sake."

That very night, when Gertrude Roddy returned from the opera, she was informed that her uncle—she called him so, though the relationship was much more distant—was very ill.

She inquired about him with the kindest interest, but did not go to him.

She asked to see the physician, and manifested the greatest concern when she was informed that the symptoms indicated typhoid fever.

"But I apprehend no immediate danger, Miss Roddy. I will send a nurse if you wish, although there is a young lady in the house who seems competent to do all that's required. She will make no mistakes about the medicine, I'm sure."

"Whom do you mean? There is no young lady in the house but myself."

"She is a slight, fair girl and your uncle seems pleased with her attention."

"Ah, it is Linda. Yes, she is very capable. She's my maid, Dr. Ross."

"Your maid, Miss Roddy? Well—well, whoever she is, she's the right kind of a person to be in a sick-room, and you can't do better than lend her to Mr. Turnbull as nurse. Good evening, Miss Roddy. I shall be in early in the morning, and have given all necessary instructions for the night to your maid."

Miss Roddy rang her bell.

"Send Linda to me," she ordered, as the housemaid appeared in answer to it.

"If you please, miss, she is in Mr. Turnbull's room, and he is sleeping."

"All the more reason why she can be spared. Do you take her place, Mrs. Rennie, and send her to me at once. I have business of great importance to be attended to."

"Linda," she said, as the girl entered the room with a pale and troubled face, "I must leave town to-morrow.

"I have promised to marry Colonel Raeburn as soon as I can get ready, and I dare not run the risk of contagion. Make as much haste as you can, and be prepared to come with me."

"Why, Miss Roddy, typhoid fever is not contagious; there is no danger," answered the girl, surprise giving place to scorn upon her countenance.

"Many doctors claim that it is, although Ross thinks otherwise; and I am quite sure that it is, especially when one's own health is run down, as mine is at present."

"But surely you do not mean to leave Mr. Turnbull while he is ill—perhaps dying?"

"How dare you argue with me! I have told you I am obliged to do so, stupid girl. Tell Doctor Ross in the morning to engage a skilled nurse, the best that can be obtained, and be ready to accompany me at noon. Do you understand? Your duty is to obey me, is it not?—not to discuss my wishes."

"Not after to-night, I believe, madame. My engagement with you will have expired to-morrow, as it was an express condition that I was not to be required to leave Hastings.

"No doubt, Dr. Ross will be willing to engage my services as nurse. In the mean time, I consider myself in charge."

And she left the room without another word, and returned to the sick man.

"I have determined to alter my will in your favour, Linda Lyle. I have been disappointed in all belonging to me.

"It is meet that I should reward faithfulness when I find it, though I am convinced no thought of reward influenced your mind.

"What is your full name, child, that I may give it to my lawyer?"

"My full name is Ethelinda Lyle Jarvis. Dear Mr. Turnbull, if I have indeed won your good opinion, forgive my deception, and do justice to your nephew, Herbert Langley.

"I am Ethel Jarvis, the unfortunate cause of your separation from him."

"Ethel Jarvis! What do you mean, girl?"

"Just what I say, sir. I entered your house with my mind made up to win your kind regard, if possible, and, with it, your consent to my marriage with Herbert Langley.

"Believe me, I had no thought of supplanting Miss Roddy, nor of injuring her in any way. I tried to persuade her against the step that has offended you.

"Dear, kind friend, will you not forgive Herbert and me for being fond of each other?"

And she smiled a little bit saucily.

"And so you are Ethel Jarvis—Herbert's Ethel!" And Mr. Turnbull's voice was soft and gentle, and he searched the girl's face with earnest eyes—eyes that had long since won her affection because they were so like Herbert's.

"Well, well; now that I know you, I can understand how impossible it was for the poor lad to obey me."

And he laughed and patted her head. "Then you will take him back to favor?"

"Yes—for your sake, my dear. And I shall give him a rich wife, too; for you, Ethel, shall be my heiress."

"No, no! I beg you will not do so. I have no claim, no right to your wealth. I have not heard from your nephew for many weeks, and he may have forgotten me—have ceased to care for me, and—"

"In that case he would certainly not inherit my money," cried Mr. Turnbull with flashing eyes.

Ethel laughed roguishly.

"He might say, with some truth, sir, that you were hard to please," she said. "However, I have really no doubt of his faithfulness, but his delay in writing makes me anxious for his well-being."

Ethel's anxiety was soon set at rest. Her next visit to the post-office was rewarded by a letter from her betrothed.

He was coming for her—was even now on his way; not yet wealthy, but with bright prospects, and a certainty sufficient for them to marry upon, and live in comfort in his distant home.

With winged footsteps she flew to Mr. Turnbull and told him all.

"But we shall not let him go back!" he said, kissing her blushing cheek. "We shall conspire to keep him here!"

A New Song.

Harry Sharp, the affable musical director, late of the Thompson Opera company, has composed a delightful song entitled "The Missionary," which he presented yesterday to Louis De Lange of the Pyke Opera company. Mr. De Lange would score a success by its production here this week.

From Sitka.

The steamer Olympian arrived from Sitka at 9 o'clock yesterday morning and came into Turner Beeton & Co.'s wharf. The weather during the trip was simply lovely and all enjoyed themselves immensely. The Olympian will leave for the Sound at 12 o'clock to-night.

A Distinguished Sight-Seer.

Evan Fitzcroft, Q. C., a distinguished lawyer of Natal, surveyed the sham fight from the straits yesterday. Seated in his cosy yacht with some favored friends he had a fine opportunity of witnessing the manœuvres. He says he has not seen anything to equal it "outside of Africa."

Hack Charges.

There are numerous complaints that heavy overcharges have been made by hackmen, in fact, that most outrageous prices were demanded. Supt. Bloomfield has had printed in another column the legal rates, and strangers would do well to consult them.

A Narrow Escape.

On Monday evening the down train on the E. & N. railway struck a hand car containing four men, near Chemainus. The occupants of the car miraculously escaped death by jumping just as the car was completely wrecked.

From Alaska.

The steamer Olympian, Capt. Jas. Carroll, arrived at Turner, Beeton & Co.'s wharf early yesterday forenoon, having on board a large number of returning excursionists. Capt. Carroll consented to hold the steamer over until to-night in order that the passengers and officers might participate in the jubilee festivities. The passengers sleep aboard and dine at the Driard, a very pleasant arrangement for all concerned.

Jubilee Service.

The jubilee service held at Christ church cathedral on Monday evening was an imposing event. The edifice was packed with persons of all denominations and as the same service was held in all churches of England yesterday great interest was manifested in this one. The choir was surpliced and was composed of boys and men under the leadership of Mr. C. H. Kent. They entered the church followed by the Lord Bishop of Columbia and the clergy, at the same time singing the processional hymn. The anthems and hymns were rendered in a manner which reflects great credit on the leader, who had evidently taken considerable pains to train the young lads. The Lord Bishop preached a most interesting sermon, taking his text from 1 Peter, 2nd chapter and 17th verse: "Fear God; Honor the King." After the benediction the choir sang "God Save the Queen. The collection amounted to $52.

The Dam Case.

At the county court, held at Spence's bridge on the 18th inst., an appeal was heard against a conviction made by the Hon. Clement F. Cornwall, J. P., against one Luhu, a servant in the employ of Mr. Walter Langley, of Bosque Ranche, who was charged by John Dowling, better known as "Oregon Jack," with having inflicted malicious injury upon a dam in "Oregon Jack's" creek. Mr. A. J. McColl, who appeared on behalf of the appellant, stated that although Mr. Langley appeared before Mr. Cornwall and informed him on the hearing of the charge that Mr. Langley's servant was merely obeying instructions in removing the dam for the purpose of obtaining water from the creek, to which he claimed to be entitled, refused to hear any evidence for the defense, although Mr. Langley offered his own evidence and that of several witnesses. For the appeal it was argued that the defendant was entitled to give evidence, and further that the act was done under a claim of right, and could not be treated criminally, even if Mr. Langley was wrong in his contention that he was entitled to priority to Dowling. After hearing the evidence the conviction by Mr. Cornwall was quashed with costs, his lordship stating that it was the undouted right of the defendant to call witnesses in his behalf.

At The Victoria.

A large and enthusiastic audience greeted the Pyke opera company at the Victoria last evening in the delightful opera of Boccacio. There are very few Victorians who have not been charmed with Miss Jeannie Winston's impersonation of Boccacio. She is an artiste of great talent, capable of portraying by delicious music the minutest phases of the character she essays, and her charming voice, together with finished acting is simply perfect. Yet, there is noticeable in stars of late who have made a great reputation a disposition to become careless and indifferent, which may not be noticed by an entire audience, though it mars the performance to those who are familiar with the text.

Miss Louise Manfred was the charming Fiametta that she always is, and as usual won the audience by her excellent acting and delightful voice.

It is a pleasure to witness the performances of Louis De Lange, as he is a conscientious actor, a close student, and never slights his role. It is unnecessary to criticize Mr. De Lange as he is universally acknowledged by all Victorians who have had the pleasure of seeing him to be a comedian of remarkable versatility and great talent. His role of Lambertuccio, is inimitable and a leading feature of the performance.

Alex. Clark as Scalza gave the same finished impersonation that won for him the admiration of the public on the occasion of his previous visit to Victoria. The other characters displayed their usual excellence.

To-night the superb opera "Oath of Love," by the author of Olivette, will be given, and our jubilee visitors should avail themselves of the opportunity to attend this performance by the finest opera company now on the Pacific coast.

Gone to a Warmer Clime.

Latest advices from San Francisco say that Prof. Sorgé only remained in that city long enough to pay a few of the old bills registered against him, and then took a steamer for South America, where he will, no doubt, do as well as he did here. It is sincerely hoped, though, that the people down in that country will watch him closely.

The Queen City Brass band will appear to-day, for the first time in uniform. The Trotting Race.

There was a good attendance at the driving park yesterday morning and lovers of the turf enjoyed an excellent race. The match was for $250 a side between George Rudge's horse Jay-Eye-See, and Thos. Shaw's horse Dart, mile heats, best two in three. Jay-Eye-See won the first heat in good time, but failed to keep the lead in the two following heats, which were won by Dart, together with the race.

Too Much Fire-Water.

On Sunday morning at eight o'clock the schooner rigged steamer San Juan arrived from Portland in tow of the steamer Phantom, with Capt. H. Kopperholdt, master of the San Juan in irons. On Wednesday, when near Destruction island his mind began to wander and he became violently insane. The next day he tried to jump overboard. Previous to this time he took the wheel and changed the course of the steamer to the south. The crew then securely fastened him and Engineer Davis brought the San Juan into port. The captain was sent to the marine hospital for treatment, when he was found to be suffering from an over-indulgence in spirituous liquors.

THE DAY IN LONDON

Along the Line of Procession From Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey.

Her Majesty Surprised at the Grandeur and Extent of the Preparations Made.

Gladstone and Salisbury Cheered—Representative Diplomatists From All Parts of the World—Comments of the European Press.

LONDON, June 21.—The press is requested to state that the number of congratulatory telegrams from public bodies and private individuals is so overwhelmingly large that it is impossible to answer them individually. The Queen is greatly touched and gratified by such expressions of loyalty and devotion from all classes of her subjects. On the advice of Lord Salisbury jubilee honors will be conferred on several liberal-unionists, and new peers will be created in honor of the jubilee, including Sir William Armstrong, Jas. McNighton, McGarel Hogg and Rt. Hon. Geo. Selater Booth.

The Paris Journal de Debates, in an article on the jubilee celebration, says all our people cordially envy Englishmen and would give a great deal could we ever be what they are to-day—a people mad with joy and happiness. This universal homage is paid not only to a queen but to a woman who has given example of great virtues. Her influence has been great and salutary, and as to her great merits in using her prerogative for the public weal, she never has been tempted to strain its exercise.

The Berlin Post says what makes Germany a sympathetic onlooker in the jubilee is the events which crowd the half century. This is a period of great importance in the world's history, not only for Englishmen but for the whole civilized world. The English people will feel they have great reason for gratitude which cannot better be expressed than by more and more farsighted and resolute facing of the great and inevitable tasks of the future.

The first day of the 51st reign of Queen Victoria opens with perfect summer weather. Thousands of people who yesterday selected locations along the route of today's procession, in order to retain them occupied them all night. Streams of carriages and pedestrians poured constantly all night through the city in all directions towards the west end. At 9 o'clock the line of route was one mass of people. Everybody, despite the discomfort and crowding manifested, was in good humor. The scene at Westminster Abbey was most brilliant; every seat was filled and every personage present was distinguished. It seems as if every locality in the world had sent one or more of its representative personages to do honor to the Queen. There never was probably in modern times assembled under one roof an audience so well or so brilliantly arranged. Every man was entitled to wear a uniform or decoration, and had both on. When the audience was all seated the scene presented was indiscribable.

When the Marquis of Salisbury and Mr. Gladstone entered Westminster Abbey they were both loudly cheered. Many of the lords and ladies were so anxious to secure their positions that they came without breakfasting. It was a strange sight to see flasks and sandwiches exchanged in the crowd by numberless aristocrats unable to withstand the hunger or thirst. This business, when added to the hum, at times seemed irreverent, even on Jubilee day in Westminster. The line of the procession from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey was as follows; From the palace portals along Constitution Hill, Piccadilly Regent street, Waterloo Place, Pall Mall, East Cockspur, Northumberland avenue, Thames Embankment, Bridge street to Abbey. The line of route was kept by nearly 10,000 troops, representing all branches of the service, in addition to six hundred boys from the naval training ships, who were drawn up at the base of Nelson's monument. In addition thousands of police, mounted and on foot, were on duty. The particular feature at the palace was that the two services were equally honored. The guards lined one side of the roadway at Buckingham gates and on the other side sailors were posted. The same was also represented in like manner at the entrance to Westminster Abbey. The first royal procession was composed of Indian princes. Punctually at 11:15 a. m. the Queen, in an open carriage, emerged from the palace gates. At sight of her thousands of voices lifted up their applause, being accompanied by music. Many military bands were stationed at the front of the palace. The Queen did not wear state robes, but was dressed in black. Her carriage was drawn by eight ponies. The Prince of Wales, Duke of Edinburgh, Duke of Connaught, her sons; Crown Prince Imperial of Germany, Marquis of Lorne, Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, and Prince Henry of Battenburg, her sons-in-law; and Prince Albert Victor and George of Wales, Prince Alfred of Edinburgh and Prince William of Prussia, her grandsons, arrived in full uniform, besides the Queen's body guard. When the people at the palace gates had shouted themselves hoarse, the cheering continued: "Long life to the Prince and Princess of Wales." The Queen as she left the palace seemed to be in excellent spirits, and she smiled and bowed graciously to the people on every side. The Queen's carriage was a large one, chocolate color, wheels red, and royal arms in gold emblazoned on the panel. Red morrocco harness used for the horses which were otherwise decorated with royal blue ribbon. All the servants wore state liveries of scarlet and gold. The other carriages, containing the members of the royal family, were of gorgeous character. The procession slowly made its way until Wellington arch was reached. Then the first introduction to London streets ensued. Emerging from Wellington arch, the first to greet the Queen was the convalescent patients and others at St. George's hospital, which was packed from basement to roof, seats having been erected for many thousand over the roof of the hospital.

It was not until Devonshire House was reached that the Queen realized the grand preparations that had been made to greet her. Here the Marquis of Hartington had a spacious gallery erected, from which hundreds of gaily dressed ladies waved their handkerchiefs and cheered the Queen from this point to Westminster Abbey. Every point of advantage being seized by contractors to fix seats, shop fronts and first floors were rented at from twenty pounds to sixty pounds each, and in some cases more. A St. James Church one thousand children were seated and sang God Save the Queen. On reaching Regent circus, where six main streets converge, the sight was a memorable one, the streets being all splendidly decorated. Many Americans had secured seats at palatial commercial establishments at Waterloo place and joined in the enthusiasm as warmly as English. In Trafalgar square nothing but heads were to be seen. The crowd here was tremendous, completely eclipsing any that had assembled at ... political gatherings of recent ...ars, and when the massive proc... reached the ... procession was Thames embank... all along the embankment, indescrib... occupied by public gardens, wh... and galleries had been erected. The ground floor of the Abbey was concealed by a lofty grand stand called St. Margarets, seats on which sold for five guineas each.

On the procession nearing the Abbey troops saluted, guns were fired, bells of the churches rang out merry peals, and flags were run up. Cheering began and continued till the Queen passed in at the west door. After passing through the vestibule Her Majesty was conducted to the grand dais under Lantean tower. She was surrounded by thirty-two members of the royal family. The scene in the Abbey when the Queen entered was dazzling. Ten thousand people were seated. They all rose. Women discarded wraps and revealed in full splendor their beauty and attire. Three galleries were built in the Abbey with seats for ten thousand. Peers and their wives were seated in the south transept, ambassadors and diplomatic corps were seated to the right and left, and peers and members of the house of commons were placed in the north transept for members of the reigning family.

Members of the royal families of Europe, etc., were within the communion rails; all great learned societies and corporations were represented, while notables of law, science, art and agriculture and workingmen's representatives from all parts of the kingdom had seats. The Queen was evidently profoundly impressed with the scene. She was noticeably pale when she reached the raised dais. She soon, however, recovered and regained the bright and pleasant aspect she had borne all the morning.

DISTRICT SCHOOLS.

CHEMAINUS SCHOOL.

The midsummer examination of Chemainus school was held on Friday last, at which there was a good attendance of pupils and their parents and friends.

The cards of merit were awarded as follows: Deportment, William Thomas; regularity, Mary Windsor; proficiency, John Windsor. A handsome writing desk which was offered as a prize for the pupil who made the most rapid progress was awarded to Thomas Henry Bonsall. Mr. and Mrs. Bonsall, Mrs. Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, Miss Lilley, Mr. Burke, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Windsor, Mr. Gibbs, Mr. Miller and Mr. Whitehouse were among the visitors. A picnic was held in the school ground after the examination, and base ball and other games were played until late in the afternoon.

HALL'S PRAIRIE SCHOOL.

The semi-annual examination of the above school took place on Friday, the 17th of June, there being about thirty-five visitors present. The scholars were examined by Mr. Reid of Clover Valley, and the teacher and showed good progress and proficiency. Recitations and songs varied the exercises. After the work was over the trustees and parents expressed themselves as well satisfied with the work of the school during the past year and their belief in the abilities of Mr. MacLennan as a teacher. The rolls of honor were distributed to Ida Hart for proficiency, Myrtle Webster for deportment, and to George Thrift for regularity and punctuality. A prize for the best recitation given by Harry Thrift, a former pupil, was won by Miss Gracie Johnson. The examination closed by singing God Save the Queen.

LYTTON PUBLIC SCHOOL.

The annual examination of the pupils of this school was held on Friday, the 17th inst., the day appointed for the general examinations throughout the province. On account of the celebration of the Queen's Jubilee the examination took place a week earlier than usual and in order further to mark this circumstance the room was nicely decorated by the teacher and pupils with a wreath and vases of flowers, gathered by them from the mountain sides in the neighborhood. The examination began at 10 o'clock and embraced the entire course of subjects appointed for public schools. The blackboards lining the walls at one end of the room showed three or four very creditable specimens of free hand drawing and the production of map drawings handed round for inspection deserved commendation for neatness and accuracy.

The examination was attended by the trustees of the school, Mr. Stevenson, Mr. Seward and Mr. Loring, who all three took part in helping Mr. Gillies, the teacher, to question the pupils. Fourteen other visitors were present, parents and relations of the scholars and other inhabitants of Lytton interested in the school and the indefatigable work of the teacher. The Rev. R. Small, one the Lytton Indian mission priests, was present and took part in the examination. Mr. Edward Pearson, J..P., from Boston Bar, who was in town came to put down his name in the book and stay as long as his engagements allowed him. No one present could have failed to notice the readiness of the answers given in mental arithmetic, especially by Arthur B. Buie, who obtained the card of merit for general proficiency. Pieces of original composition were read by two of the elder scholars. Amongst the recitations that given by Frank Stevenson, one of the younger pupils, was delivered with clearness and spirit.

The answers given in history and geography were satisfactory, with the exception of one or two who, perhaps, through nervousness, seemed to be not quite clear about the months and seasons of the year.

The general character of the examination indicated that both teacher and scholars had their hearts in their work, and that real pains had been bestowed upon it during the past months.

At the close of the examination both visitors and children were regaled with oranges and candies procured for them by the kindly efforts of Mrs. Stevenson, who wished the year of the Jubilee to be marked in this way, and obtained the help of some of the trownsfolk. Before the breaking up Mr. Gillies made reference to some signs of encouragement which the past year had produced. Though only two names had been added to the register the average attendance had risen from 13.12 to 15.66, and the school had received 87 visits as compared with 61 of last year.

At his request the Rev. R. Small distributed the cards of merit provided by the department; that for deportment to Arthur Thomas Seward; for regularity and punctuality to Frank Maxwell Stevenson, and for general proficiency to Arthur Brander Buie.

After giving three cheers for Mrs. Stevenson, Mr. Gillies, and the Queen, the school broke up for the holidays.

THE REVELSTOKE SCHOOL.

The half-yearly examination of this ..hool took place on the 17th inst., and ..as attended by the trustees, the parents ..f the children, and many others who take an interest in the school.

The exercises consisted of recitations, reading, dialogues, singing, etc., in all of which the pupils showed considerable proficiency, and which everybody present enjoyed very much, and expressed their satisfaction at the progress of the school. Then followed the distribution of prizes. The provincial card of merit for proficiency was won by Florence McAlpine, for punctuality and regularity, by George Gabin, for deportment, by George Keyes.

Mr. J. F. Hume presented a handsome album to the pupil who obtained the highest number of marks during the term. Dr. McAlpine presented a book to each pupil in the school. Mr. Lobb, Mr. J. B. Kerr, Mr. George Kerr, Mr. Teetzel, Mr. Delaney and Mr. Hall made presentations of various articles as pocket knives, silk handkerchiefs, pictures, photographic scenes, scent bottles, etc., which filled the hearts of the school children of Revelstoke with delight. Even the teacher was not forgotten.

Mr. W. M. Brown, chairman of the ...ool board occupied the chair and distributed the prizes to the successful pupils.

A vote of thanks was unanimously tendered to the teacher, Miss McAlpine, for the efficient manner in which the school was conducted.
